The Unlock Fluency Method

English Learning Resources 🌟📚🇬🇧

Make it a goal to learn 5–10 new formal or idiomatic expressions weekly. Use them in conversations. Apps like Quizlet help you to create your own study tools. Consider reading articles on BBC News (or other news/media outlets that publish articles on topics you're interested in). This will help you to find expressions relevant for you. If you find news outlets too difficult, but you still want to read news-related articles, News in Levels is a really good resource. You can choose your level and slowly build on it.

Consider joining my WhatsApp group where I share weekly icebreakers, words and phrases, and how we use them in British English. In my monthly Newsletter, I share TED talks with guided questions, podcast episodes on the topic of learning English, and accent spotlight videos in an effort to familiarise you with all the different English dialects.

For more grammar-specific content, English Page is a good resource, as they offer explanations and exercises to practise. Perfect English Grammar is another good resource that offers grammar explanations and practice.

Listening to podcasts or watching films/TV shows weekly can be both fun and educational. If you find watching telly in English hard, start by using subtitles. Then, slowly stop using them (the point is to understand the gist, not every single word!). English Addict with Mr Duncan is a YouTube channel with short videos about everyday topics and vocabulary if you only have a few minutes to spare.

Some podcasts I recommend:

- All Ears English (American English)
- Luke's English Podcast (British English)
- The English we speak
- TED Talks Daily

Practise speaking as often as you can! Consider apps like Hello Talk or Tandem to build confidence. I can't stress enough just how important it is to keep speaking.

Finally, on my website I offer several course formats: evening, weekend, or weekly courses. If you've enjoyed my method, take a look or even share with a friend! 🙂

Remember: the more you expose yourself to English, the better for your brain. Make sure it's consistent and that you find something you truly enjoy!

I hope you find these resources and tips useful!

Best,
Dr Christina Grey
