

English Learning Resources

To learn more collocations and topic-specific phrases to enhance precision, I'd recommend to make it a goal to learn 5–10 new formal or idiomatic expressions weekly and use them in conversations. You can use apps like Quizlet or do this by reading articles e.g. on BBC News (or other news/media outlets that publish articles on topics you're interested in).

You should consider joining my WhatsApp group where I share weekly icebreakers, words/proverbs and my monthly Newsletter where I share TED talks, podcast episodes, and accent spotlights.

News in Levels is a really good resource for a bit of reading and learning new words and you can choose your level and slowly build on it. English Page is also a good resource for grammar, as they offer explanations and exercises. Perfect English Grammar is another good resource for refining grammar and practicing.

Listening to a podcast or watching shows like Friends (with subtitles to begin with - if you need them) could be both fun and educational. Here are some podcasts I like:

- All Ears English (they focus on American English)
- Luke's English Podcast (he focuses on British English)
- The English we speak
- TED Talks Daily

I like the YouTube channel English Addict with Mr Duncan. He makes really shorts videos about everyday topics and vocabulary so it might be useful for listening and vocabulary practice.

I also recommend practicing with speaking partners on apps like Hello Talk or Tandem to build confidence.

Finally, I offer different course formats e.g. evening, weekend, or weekly courses through my website.

Remember: the more you expose yourself to English, the better for your brain. Make sure it's consistent!

Hope you find these resources useful!!

Best,
Christina

p.s I'd really appreciate it if you could circulate my website, maybe recommend it to your friends, colleagues, or employer/company. I'm a small company and I'm trying to spread the word!
